OBSERVATIONS ON CONVENTION

RESULTS OF FIRST DAY'S WORK WILL TAMMANY SUPPORT
CLARK?—WILSON MEN
ACTIVE.

Baltimore, June 26.—Clark's victory is in sight only on the assumption that Clark gets the support of Murphy, Taggart, Sullivan and other democratic leaders who are usually called reactionary, but who fit in under Judge Parker's description of a progressive as a democrat who is opposed to the third term for president, who blames the high cost of living on the tariff and declares his unalterable opposition to special privilege, albeit in vague and undefined terms.

The Wilson camp is full of surprises for one who expects to see long faces and hearing wailing and mourning over today's battle over the temporary chairman. The Wilson managers say that they have assurance that they will get all of the Underwood following, except the Georgia delegation, and they are feeling relieved over the indications that Bryan is no longer a menace to the Wilson candidacy.

Speculation tonight centers around the roll call on the vote that elects Parker as temporary chairman. This roll call shows that all but forty-two Wilson men stood firmly for Bryan while Clark failed to deliver 197 of his votes to the Murphy candidate. There are 1,092 votes in the convention. It takes 729 to nominate under the two-thirds rule. The Clark-Underwood-Tammany coalition polled 579 votes for Judge Parker. This is 150 short of the necessary two-thirds. The Wilson people say they will not come from their ranks.

On the other hand, the Wilson adherents in conference are counting on not exceeding 330 men who will stay in the fight against Clark till the convention ends. They are negotiating tonight with the Pennsylvania and other delegations to form a compact block of 364 men who will dead lock the convention if necessary, to prevent the nomination of Champ Clark. They believe that there will be enough Underwood and otherwise uninstructed delegates to join in this movement to make Clark's nomination impossible and possibly to enable them to force an acceptable compromise, should Wilson fail to capture the nomination.

Everything, of course, depends upon the nature of the pact or understanding between Murphy and the Clark managers. It is clear that many Clark men voted for Bryan against Parker because they did not care to go on record at home as having voted against Bryan in the fight against Parker and, therefore, it is patent that Clark can poll a stronger vote than Bryan did if the Murphy coalition lines up for the Missouriian.

To win they will have to carry with them to Clark all of the Underwood vote, and the Wilson managers claim tonight to have assurances that they will never do this. The Wilson managers also say that the lines are so sharply drawn that Bryan can now no longer contend that both Clark and Wilson are progressives and they assert that he will be compelled to throw his whole strength and influence now for Gov. Wilson.

The convention proceedings and results were dramatic to the point of tragic. The central figure was William J. Bryan.

He has been largely responsible for the situation as it has developed, for twenty years of friendship and co-operation with Champ Clark blinded him to the obvious fact that no man was too much of a reactionary for Clark to deal and dicker with for a division of state delegates at the time of the various primaries. Today the delegates who were instructed for the man who Bryan said was a good enough progressive for him, turned upon Bryan despite his appeals and voted him down for temporary chairman.

In vain did Bryan turn to Representative Ollie James of Kentucky. James would not be the progressive candidate before the convention against Parker. He even declined to put Bryan in nomination. Bryan resorted to his old friend and ever faithful ally, Senator Kern of Indiana.

He nominated Kern. Kern took the platform and made a conciliatory speech, calling upon Judge Parker to prevent the threatened clash by agreeing with him on a man for the place—O'Gorman, Clayton, Culberson, anybody who stood well in the party. He paused for a reply, Parker sat next to the standard of the New York delegation, his face purpling to the top of his bald spot on his head.

The New Yorker spent several uncomfortable minutes while the great audience yelled and cheered. A block of several hundred delegates, representing those states most strongly controlled by the Murphy-Clark coalition sat like marble, mute and immovable. Then up to the platform ran Representative John J. Fitzgerald of Brooklyn with a message to Kern that New York stands pat on Parker. Sadly Senator Kern announced to the convention:

"I have submitted a proposal for peace. There is no response from Judge Parker. Those who control this situation must take the responsibility." Then he declined the nomination made by Bryan, and in turn nominated Bryan. Bryan accepted and the roll call soon followed. By a vote of 579 to 510, the temporary organization of the National convention was turned over to Tammany, only by reason of the fact that the Clark managers were able to deliver the requisite number of votes to Murphy.

Queen Alexandra Day.

London, June 26.—The love and esteem in which Queen Alexandra is held by all British subjects was strikingly manifested today, on the occasion of the first celebration of Alexandra Day. The day is designed to be an annual fixture in commemoration of the anniversary of the arrival in England of the then Danish princess to become the bride of the future King Edward VII.

In accordance with the suggestion of Queen Alexandra herself the celebration was converted into a one-day campaign for charity, the purpose being to bring the needs of the philanthropic and charitable organizations of London before the people. With this end in view more than 1,000 ladies of title and distinction in the social world presided at flower stalls scattered over the metropolis and from early morning until late afternoon sold artificial wild roses for the benefit of the London Hospital fund. All of the flower sellers were dressed alike in white with wreaths of wild roses around their hats. The flower baskets that they carried were hung with ribbons of white and blue, the Danish colors, in honor of Queen Alexandra's native land.

Baskets of coin and notes were collected Lady Mond and a bevy of pretty girls who had a stall on the terrace of the House of Commons and who permitted no member to escape without paying tribute. October ladies of title who were stationed at prominent points in the city included the Duchess of Marlborough, the Marchioness of Crews, the duchess of Westminster, the Marchioness of Duferin and Lady Paget.

TAFT ELECTORS FILE

IN KANSAS PRIMARY
Topeka, Kan., June 26.—Petitions are being circulated in Kansas to nominate under the state primary law a set of ten presidential electors favorable to President Taft. The time for filing these petitions expires Wednesday night. Since the recent convention at Chicago, the Taft men have been afraid those of the electors favorable to Colonel Roosevelt, whose petitions already were filed, would not vote for the president, and determined to put an entire new list on the ticket.

WRECK ON FRISCO NARROWLY AVERTED

Tuesday when the morning south bound Frisco passenger train was about three miles south of Holdenville, a bad wreck was averted only by the vigilance and quick work of the engineer. A pair of wheels of the front truck of the baggage car slipped from the rails and ran on the ties for some distance. On seeing the trouble the engineer stopped the train but not until the other two pairs of wheels in the truck also slipped off. The track was torn up for a short distance and the train was delayed about five hours until the wrecked could be brought from Francis and the car righted. No one was hurt.

PROGRESSIVES CAN'T GET PLACES ON TICKETS

Oklahoma City, June 26.—Plans of Roosevelt followers in Oklahoma to nominate candidates all down the line on a Progressive ticket have received a temporary setback as a result of the announcement Tuesday by Ben W. Riley, secretary of the state election board, that he will not take official cognizance of the existence of a Progressive party. Riley says that the only parties which have a legal existence in Oklahoma are Democratic, Republican, Socialist and Prohibition.

Local Roosevelt leaders had planned, if they could find candidates for all of the places before Thursday of this week, when the filings close, to put out candidates for presidential electors, United States senator, congressmen and all of the state offices which are to be filled this year. It has also been announced that in Oklahoma county candidates will file for the legislature and for county offices.

The men back of the movement say that if secretary Riley refuses to accept their filings they will go into court and mandamus him to do so. It is probable that no test will be made along that line until the Roosevelt contingent returns from Chicago and a conference of the leaders can be held.

All of the candidates for presidential electors nominated by the republican state convention are Roosevelt men, but the plan is for them to withdraw and allow Chairman Jim Harris to replace them with Taft supporters. In case the Roosevelt men are able to get on the state ticket as Progressives. If not they may decide to stick as republicans and turn their votes to Roosevelt if elected.

The T. K. K.'s

Thursday evening the T. K. K.'s were the guests of Miss Rebecca Tolbert. The first form of amusement was a contest, "the things of Grandmother's kitchen." Mr. Cox and Miss Norris guessing more correctly. The next was a contest of filling in the blanks of "old sayings." Then the hostess passed small tea cups, in each was a fortune. The reading of these furnished quite a lot of fun. Delicious refreshments of lemon snow, banana and whip cream cake, and almond and coco-nut cake were served to the guests as they were seated in the various "cozy corners." The enjoyable evening was closed with music. The young men and Miss Mamie Mims were guests of honor.

The following were present: Misses Marguerite Ross, Nell Freeman, Estelle Torbett, Alpha Sledge, Ruth Sowers, Ada Norris, Edyth Brown and Mamie Mims; Messrs. Ebey, Kennedy, Harraway, Reed, Alderson, Thompson, Bryan, Cox and Bobbitt.

SMITH'S

RESOLUTIONS OF THE HUGO CITY COUNCIL

Upon the Candidacy of R. H. Stanley for Congress.

Be it resolved by the Mayor and the City Council of the City of Hugo, Okla., that,

Whereas, At the next general election to be held in the month of November, there is to be elected among other officers a member of congress from the Fourth Congressional District, of the State of Oklahoma, and

Whereas, heretofore, since statehood our representative from said district has resided in the Western part of said district, and separated from and not in close touch with the true conditions existing in the eastern portion of said district, and

Whereas, Because of the great natural resources to be found in the eastern portion of said district, including timber and coal, all of which must be developed in the very near future, in order that the southeastern portion of the great State of Oklahoma shall come into its own and relieve the tax paying people of said portion of the state of a great burden placed thereon by reason of the non taxable property now owned in said section of the state, and

Whereas, We believe the proper representation in congress from this district will be of greater value to the City of Hugo, Oklahoma, and without which it cannot properly develop by reason of the non-development of the natural resources surrounding the said city, which development can only come through proper representation in Congress from this said District, and

Whereas, We firmly believe that our city's interests and the interest of the whole southeastern section of this state can be best served by sending to congress from this district a man familiar with all the conditions existing therein and who is familiar with the wants and needs of the people residing in said district, and who has the ability to undertake the great work of providing proper legislation for the proper development of said southeastern portion of the said state of Oklahoma, and who will fearlessly and without favor undertake the great work placed upon him, and,

Whereas, We believe that R. H. Stanley of the city of Hugo, who has announced his candidacy for the nomination of congress from said Fourth Congressional District of Oklahoma, fully realizing the greatness of the work to be done in and for said district, is wholly competent, able and willing to undertake the burden connected with said office and to work to the end that proper legislation may be enacted whereby the people in said district, and especially the eastern portion thereof, may be relieved of the great burden placed upon them by reason of the non-tax paying people, by securing the sale and development of the great quantities of segregated coal and timber lands in said district and causing the same to be placed upon the market in such manner that they may be sold and become a tax paying property, and further believing that Mr. Stanley is in every manner amply able and competent to serve the people of the Fourth Congressional District of the State of Oklahoma, and would be a credit to said district as it should be represented, and further that the character and reputation of Mr. Stanley is of such nature, and his standing as a lawyer of such high order, that we feel constrained to commend him to the voters of said Congressional District.

Therefore, Be it Resolved, That, we, the Mayor and the Council of the City of Hugo, Choctaw County, Oklahoma, having in mind the needs of this City of Hugo, and the country surrounding the same, and the greatness thereof, together with the advantages to be gained by the proper development of said natural resources, and having in mind that such development can only come through the proper and effective legislation, brought about by hard and efficient work in the legislative halls of our nation, and further having in mind the ability, interest, integrity and untiring nature of Mr. R. H. Stanley, hereby endorse, without thought of political affiliation or differences, his said candidacy and recommend him to the voters of said congressional district, believing as we do, that should he be elected, that he will not only represent the eastern portion of the Fourth Congressional District but

ANOTHER COUNTY SEAT CONTENT IN CREEK CO.

Oklahoma City, June 26.—Because of the extreme amount of fraud and corruption that prevailed in the contest between Bristow and Sapulpa in the election to determine which should be the permanent county seat of Creek county, a new election has been ordered by the supreme court. The opinion, written by Justice Dunn, was handed down Tuesday. It approves in part the report of Referee Charles H. Parker of Enid, who heard the evidence when the election was contested.

The struggle for supremacy between the two towns dates back to the days of the constitutional convention, when that body designated Sapulpa as the temporary county seat of Creek county. In August, 1908, an election was held to settle the matter of where the permanent county seat should be located, Bristow being the sole competitor of the larger town.

The election returns showed a total of 4,221 votes, of which Sapulpa received 2,372 and Bristow 1,849, giving the former a majority of 523. Bristow then proceeded to contest the election and Parker was appointed as referee.

FIELD MEET AT NORMAL TUESDAY

Interesting Athletic Event at Normal. Johnston County Wins First Honors.

Tuesday afternoon the field meet, the principal athletic event of the season, was pulled off on the normal campus in the presence of a large and enthusiastic audience. The various counties represented in the normal put contestants forward and although every event was hotly contested, first honors went to Johnston county, its men winning 36. Pontotoc county came second with 24, Coal was third with 14, and Pottawatomie came fourth with 3. Although the records may not be up to those made by well trained athletes, it is only justice to state that the program was arranged only a week before it was pulled off and that in that short time no one could do much training.

SON OF MR. AND MRS. J. W. BOTTOMS DIES

Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, J. W. Bottoms and wife, who live near the brick plant, had the misfortune to lose their little son, Otha, who died of bronchial pneumonia. The funeral services were held Wednesday and the interment took place at Egypt cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. T. V. B. Mullinax. The little one was only fourteen months old. While the parting in such a case brings pangs of sorrow to the parents, there is comfort in the knowledge that the little one is spared many sorrows that come to those who reach the adult age, and that the little flower was only transplanted in a garden where death never comes.

VALUATIONS OF ADA SHOW INCREASE

The rolls of the tax assessor indicate a healthy growth of valuations for the city of Ada over 1911. Before being raised by the state board, the assessed valuation of personal property for 1911, above exemptions was $830,200. For the current year it is $849,732, an increase of $19,532. Real estate in 1911 was assessed at $1,579,865. For 1912 it is $1,696,968, an increase of $117,103. The total increase of taxable values is $136,639.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Miss Leone Steed visited her father at Tupelo today.

The purest and the best "Crystal Ice Cream" served at Ramsey's.

Mrs. T. O. Cullins and T. O. junior, left this morning for a visit to Durant.

Ike Sales of Norman, sheriff of Cleveland county, was a business visitor to Ada today.

E. J. Peters the well known architect of Shawnee, is in town conferring with the school board regarding the improvements to be made in the city school buildings.

The DeSota offers an excellent program this evening. The first is an absorbing and elevating drama: Whom God Hath Joined. The animated weekly, No. 12, is unusually attractive. Coming: Camille.

The enrollment of the normal now totals 392. To enable this large number to keep in touch with one another and with everything connected with the school, a bulletin is issued every day at noon.

President A. L. Beck of the cement company left this morning for St. Louis where he will appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission in a rate case. The Ada mill wants as good rates as are accorded the Kansas mills.

No matter what happens you can't afford to miss Broncho Bill and the Bandits at the Majestic this evening. The story is a pretty warm one, but ends all right. This is only one of three pictures that will make up the program. The Suit of armor is another strong drama. The third is known as the Haunted Locker. You can't afford to miss that one at all.

Cure for Nerves.
People cultivate nerves to a large extent and do not apply simple rules to cure them. Healthy work particularly out of doors, is an excellent antidote to nerves. Onions are a very good tonic for nervous people. Cranberries are good for sufferers from inactive liver.

JAMES ELECTED CHAIRMAN

Kentuckian Unanimous Choice for Permanent Chairman of Convention—Harmony Prevails.

Baltimore, June 26.—Special to Ada News)—The democratic convention held a brief but harmonious session today, adjourning at 2:16 to meet again at 8 this evening. A feature of the days developments is the spirit of good fellowship now prevailing. If there is to be any sort of repetition of the scenes at Chicago, the session held today does not indicate it. The best of order prevailed throughout and all speakers were wildly cheered. Everyone realized the opportunity of the party to achieve a great victory in November, and all seem willing to conciliate the others.

Bryan was offered the chairmanship of bronchial pneumonia. The funeral declined to accept the position on his motion John W. Kern was made chairman. Bryan and Kern's hold on the resolutions committee was shown by the adoption by a vote of 44 to 11 a motion offered by Bryan to the effect that the time honored order of procedure be changed and the platform submitted after the nominations are made, instead of before.

During the session of the convention Gore, Folk and others spoke. Just before adjournment a big Underwood demonstration was pulled off.

At the evening session the committees will report. Chairman James will deliver his address and adjournment will be taken until tomorrow.

WILL EQUALIZE PONTOTOC CO. VALUES JULY 12

Leo Meyer, state auditor, has notified County Assessor Heard, that the State Board of Equalization will take up the returns of Pontotoc county July 12. He invites all who are interested to be present and give what information they may have that will be of assistance to the Board in arriving at a just decision in fixing the valuations for the current year.

Novel and Serviceable.

PONTOTOC COUNTY TEACHERS ENTERTAIN

Tuesday evening the Pontotoc county teachers at the normal entertained those from other counties, and from all accounts, it was a most brilliant event in the social life of the school. Every one was given an opportunity to become acquainted with his fellow students and at the same time enjoy a splendid evening of entertainment. After the program refreshments were served. The punch was prepared by Miss Ruble, and her class in domestic science.

Following is the program rendered:
Piano Solo—Miss Baker.
Reading—Miss Myers.
Vocal Solo—Miss Thompson.
Reading—Mrs. Jenkins.
Reading—Mrs. Perkins.
Vocal Solo—Miss Ritchie.
Address—Mr. Perkins.

PROMINENT REPUBLICAN WILL VOTE DEMOCRATIC TICKET

That there is trouble ahead for the republicans of Oklahoma, is evidenced by the following from the Muskogee Times-Democrat:

"If by voting for Bryan or Wilson, or any other good progressive a man becomes a democrat, then put me down as a democrat, for if I am alive on election day and can go to the polls, I certainly am not going to vote for Taft and will be glad to vote for Bryan or Wilson."

This positive and emphatic statement was made today by Judge W. J. Robertson, republican wheel horse and chairman of the Muskogee county convention, which put the steam roller to James Fore and the Taft forces in the district court room about three months ago.

It is to be no band wagon for Judge Robertson as he has burned all his bridges behind him and is out in the open. While an original Roosevelt booster and still a strong believer in the man from Oyster Bay, he is of the opinion that the great fight is on the defeat of William H. Taft, and this can be better done than by any other man. Teddy might divide the strength of the progressives and the safe and sane way is for the democrats to nominate Bryan and then the progressives of the country would sweep him into the office. The judge said that the nomination of Taft was secured through fraud and thievery and while he had supported the republican ticket for more than forty years he was of the opinion that he was just as good a republican as ever by bolting Taft. "It is not a case of leaving the party, but of the party leaving you," said Judge Robertson.

TIME TO ACT

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness—Profit by Ada
People's Experience.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time, but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs and ankles, or any part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when you old time health and vigor will return. Cures in Ada prove the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Mrs. Catherine A. Carter, 309 South Stockton avenue, Ada, Okla., says: "I suffered from rheumatic twinges and other symptoms of kidney trouble. My back ached and the kidney action was irregular. When I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills I used them. They relieved the pain and regulated the kidney action. I highly recommend this remedy to any one suffering as I did."

DISNEY STILL STICKS

TO ROOSEVELT

Muskogee, Ok., June 26.—"Hell, no, I am not going to support Taft," said L. G. Disney, the Oklahoma "bearcat" who was flattened out by the national committee steam roller in Chicago. "Tell the world I am not going to support Taft. I have fought democratic election steals too long in Oklahoma to uphold a steal of the leaders of my own party."

Diz returned home Tuesday morning. Although he is flattened out politically, he is robust physically and when he made a declaration to quit the republicans in power, he showed his teeth, a la Roosevelt.

"The fight for the election of Mr. Roosevelt will continue. The boys are gathering up strength for the second and final round. The fight will be made to elect presidential electors. Republican states will elect enough men pledged to Roosevelt to win the electoral college.

"A new party will be organized. The name has not been chosen. It will take definite form some time after the democratic national convention. The rank and file of the republican party in their various states will put out candidates on the republican ticket pledged to progressiveness, and the same wing that selected the majority of delegates for Roosevelt will win this fall. Electors will be selected in the August primaries. Throughout Oklahoma the progressive republicans will file candidates for the legislature before Thursday. These men will be nominated at the primary, and some of them will be elected. They will control the balance of power in selecting a United States senator.

"Should the democrats at Baltimore nominate a reactionary candidate, a progressive on an independent ticket has a chance to win. Disney denies that the Oklahoma fellows have been thrown down by Committeeman George Priestley. He says that Priestley has not turned his proxy over to Dennis Flynn.

Anent the fist fight, when the national committee was in session, Disney knows little. He says that if Victor hit him, he did not know it, he was so angry at the committee's actions. He admits that he and Victor had a few cuss words. If Victor struck him, he says it was done by Victor to gain notoriety in the hope of being re-appointed marshal.

Running his hand through his hair, and spreading the Teddy grin, Disney declared that the fight has just started. What he said about members of the national committee, and the engineers and firemen on the steam roller is too hot to print.

There was a click of the lock, and the heavy door swung open. I stood motionless, tempted to spring, yet not daring the venture. Peter backed majestically out, and I caught a glimpse of the graybeard, and the black outline of a pistol. Then the door closed, leaving me alone. The little scrap of candle left sputtered feebly, and, after walking across the floor a half-dozen times, striving to gain control of my temper, I blew it out, and crawled into the bunk. There was nothing I could do, but wait for morning; not a sound reached me from without, and before I realized the possibility, I was fast asleep.

I must have slept long and soundly, for when I finally awoke a gleam of sun lay the full length of the room, and food was upon the table. Some one—Peter, no doubt—had entered and departed without arousing me. Sleep had left me in a pleasant frame of mind, and I ate heartily, wondering vaguely what the day would disclose. I determined one thing, that when Peter returned for the dishes, I would back him into a corner and choke at least a portion of the truth out of his unwilling throat. I had hardly reached this decision when the door opened, and he stood there gazing at me with sphinx-like stupidity. I arose to my feet, gripping the back of a chair, but the utter vacancy in that face seemed to numb action. There was no positive expression, no dim glimmer of interest in his features; the shining bald head alone gave him a grotesque appearance, restraining me from violence. I could as easily have warred with a baby.

"I trust, sir, you slept well," he said soothingly, "and that the service is satisfactory."

I choked back my indignation, the quiet deference of his manner causing me to feel like a brute.

"Nothing could be added to my happiness," I answered, "unless it might be a little information which you seem disinclined to furnish."

He waved one hand, as though brushing calmly aside some imagined insect.

"Disinclined? Oh, no, sir; there is nothing to conceal, sir, I assure you." "Then, for God's sake, let it out of your system, man!" I burst forth impatiently. "Whom am I a prisoner to? What am I held for? What sort of treatment is this I am receiving?"

Peter bowed, without the tremor of an eyelash.

"Do not mention it, sir," he murmured smoothly; "we are only too proud to have you as our guest at Elmhurst. It has been very quiet here now for some weeks, sir, and your coming was welcome to us all."

I could only stare at the fellow with open mouth, so dumbfounded as to be speechless. Of all the idiots I had ever met he was the worst, or else his acting was magnificent. To save me I was not certain which might be the correct guess. He continued in stately solemnity:

"I trust there remains nothing more you desire to learn sir? If not, I am requested to conduct you to the library. Ah, thank you, sir—this way, please."

He stood aside, statue-like, his eyes looking directly past me, and pointed with dignity to the open door. I obeyed the calm movement of that hand as though it had been a military order, but, as I stepped into the twilight of the outer basement, I suddenly perceived the presence there of the attendant graybeard. He moved in advance, and I followed, aware that Peter was closely at my heels. A glance told me here was a library, not only in name, but in fact, a large square room, well lighted, the furniture mahogany, shining like glass, three of the walls lined with books, mostly in sombre bindings. A green-topped table occupied the center of the apartment, a massive affair, flanked by a leather upholstered reading chair, while before the front windows were cushioned ledges. My rapid glimpse about ended in Peter standing in dignified silence barely within the door, his hand upon the knob.

"I Hardly Think, Sir, That Would Be Advisable. The Man Outside Is Armed and Might Hurt You."

"I am authorized, sir," he said impressively, gazing directly across my shoulder, not a feature expressing emotion, "to permit you to remain here on parole."

"Parole? What do you mean?" "Parole was, I believe, the word used, sir," in calm explanation. "It is, as I understand, sir, a military term signifying pledge."

"Oh, I know that. Kindly concede that I possess some small intelligence, Peter. But to whom is this parole given, and what does it imply?"

"To myself, sir. This may seem slightly unconventional, sir, but I trust you will repose sufficient confidence in me not to object. The sole requirements are that you remain in this room until sent for."

"That will not be long?"

"I think not, sir."

"And who will send for me?"

Peter's eyes surveyed me, but without expression.

"I am quite unable to answer that, sir."

He was enough to provoke a saint, but I had already butted my head against that stone wall sufficiently to learn the uselessness of any further attempt. Peter was Peter, and I crushed back my first impatient exclamation to say humbly:

"All right, my man, I'll wait here."

I sank back into the upholstered chair, and for a moment after he had closed the door I did not move. Then, scarcely knowing whether to laugh or swear over the situation, I crossed the room, and gazed out through the window. Far down the winding driveway, half concealed behind the trees, a body of British troops was tramping toward the house.

CHAPTER XIII.

A New Combination.

My first thought was that this must prove a trap, and I drew hastily back behind the curtain, believing myself justified in an effort at escape. Surely, under such conditions, my word of parole to Peter had no binding force. Yet I waited long enough to glance forth again. The advancing body was less than a hundred strong, Queen's Rangers and Hessians, from their uniforms, straggling along on foot, limping, dusty and without arms. These must be the remnant of Delavan's command, released by their guard of partisans, and now wearily seeking refuge. But why were they coming here? Surely this was not the Philadelphia road?

They turned in upon the open lawn in front of the door, and I could plainly distinguish the faces. There could no longer be any doubt but what these were the men we had fought and defeated the evening before. Grant, with the two Hessian officers, was in advance, and the former strode directly toward the house, while the majority of his following flung themselves at full length on the ground, as though utterly exhausted. Some strange fascination held me motionless, watching the man climb the front steps. The iron knocker rang loudly twice before there came any response from within. Then I could hear voices, but the words reaching me were detached, and without definite meaning. Finally the door closed, and the two men passed along the hall, beyond the room in which I waited. Then Peter's voice said solemnly, as if announcing a distinguished guest:

"Captain Alfred Grant!"

There was an exclamation of surprise, a quick exchange of sentences indistinguishable, although I was sure of Grant's peculiar accent, and the other voice was that of the young Light Dragoon lieutenant. Uncertain what best to do I stole toward the door and gripped the knob. This was the only known way out, for I dare not venture to use the window which was in plain view of those soldiers resting on the lawn. Whether Peter had retired or not, I possessed no means of knowing, yet I opened the door silently a bare inch to make sure. At the same instant my ears caught the lieutenant's dismissing order, even as my eyes had glimpse of Swanson's broad back blocking the open doorway of a room nearly opposite.

"That will do, Peter, for the present. Have the table prepared for three guests at once."

He backed out, casting a quick glance of caution in my direction, and disappeared down the hall, rubbing his bald head industriously. I opened the door wider, wondering if I dare venture upon slipping by unobserved. Then Grant spoke, his voice loud enough to be easily heard:

"How did we come here? Why, where else could we go? The damned rebels stripped us clean; we had to have food. This was the nearest place where we were certain of getting any. Of course I didn't know our foragers had left Elmhurst alone, and that—for some cause which mystifies Clinton—these Jersey outlaws have been equally considerate. There was plenty to be had here, and I meant to have it in spite of the servants."

"You must have marched straight past your own place," the boyish voice interrupted.

"Well, what if we did. There was nothing there, as you know. The house has been stripped to a mere shell. Not a nigger left, nor a horse. I'd like to know what influence keeps this property untouched?"

"That's easily answered. You forget we are a divided family, with fighting men on either side."

"Little these outlaws care for that." "At least they appear to, as we remain unmolested. There has not been a raiding party halted here since the war began."

"Well, if you hadn't been at home, there would have been one alone now," burst forth Grant rather roughly. "Those fellows out there are desperate enough to sack the house if that was their only method of getting food. And I promised they should have the chance."

"Oh, you did, indeed! That would have proven a friendly act."

"Necessity does not take much account of friendship. I was responsible for a hundred starving men. Under such conditions force would be justified. I doubt if I could control the fellows now if provisions should be refused."

"There is no necessity for indulging in threats, Captain Grant," said the boy's voice coldly. "Elmhurst has never yet turned a soldier away in hunger. Peter will instruct what few servants remain to attend to the immediate needs of your men. May I ask how long you expect to remain?"

I thought Grant was walking nervously back and forth across the room. "How long? Until night, probably. Then with a bite in our haversacks we'll take the road again. That is, providing you condescend to act as our host for so long a time. Odds life! but this reception is not over warm to my thinking."

"Elmhurst is not a tavern, sir."

"No; but the home of a loyalist—the commander of half those men out yonder. However I am not pleading for them, but myself personally. What welcome have I had? By all the gods, I was almost compelled to fight that bald-headed old fool to even gain admittance to the hall. Were those your orders?"

"Assuredly not. But you must consider circumstances, and forgive Peter for being over zealous in my service. I received you as soon as I knew who you were."

"Yes," somewhat mollified, "I presume that is true, although you are chilly enough, the Lord knows. But what brings you here?"

"That must remain my secret, Captain Grant—for the present."

"Oh, very well. I thought it might have some connection with Eric's presence in this neighborhood."

"With Eric! What do you mean? Have you seen him?"

"Ah! so I've got below the surface at last! I thought I might with that thrust. Yes, I saw him last night. I didn't know what the devil the fellow was up to, but I thought I'd let him play out his game. It was a right jerry trick, so far as it went, but unfortunately the rebels came in before I discovered what it all led up to."

"You do not make it very clear to me."

"I told you it was not even clear to myself. This is all I know. When I joined Delavan last night just after dark, he had a young officer of Light Dragoons in charge of his advance guard. I merely got a glimpse of the fellow as we rode in, and he looked so devilishly like Eric that I asked Delavan who the lad was. He said he had joined at Mount Holly with three men, was going through to Philadelphia with despatches from New York, and was only too glad to escort the rest of the way. Being short of officers Delavan gave him charge of the van."

"Did he recognize you?" "I hardly think so; it was pretty dark, and I was put on guard over the rear wagons. I supposed I would have ample opportunity to learn the truth after it became daylight."

"But you believed him to be Eric?"

"Yes, and after the attack I was convinced. He and the three men with him bolted and got away. Must have run at the first fire, for the fellows had us completely hemmed in. It was Eric all right, and that is about half the reason why I led my men back here—I wanted to find out if he was hiding about the old place. Is it true you haven't seen him?"

"Quite true; indeed I had no reason to suppose him in the Jerseys at this time."

Grant remained silent, probably not wholly convinced that he was being told the truth, and yet not venturing to state openly his suspicions. However the other said no more, and finally the Ranger felt compelled to answer.

"Of course," he explained rather lamely, "I couldn't altogether blame you for concealing the boy if he had shown up here, but you will realize that as a King's officer I have a serious duty to perform."

"You would apprehend Eric? Would betray him into British hands? Is that your meaning, Captain Grant?" "What else could I do? Don't be unreasonable! Boy as he is, no one in all that crew of ragamuffins has done us greater harm. Again and again he has learned our secrets and brought Washington information of our plans. How he does it is the mystery of this department—How he personally offered a thousand pounds for his arrest. Surely you know that. Last night I thought we had him in our power, but the very devil seems to protect him from capture, even when luck brings him fairly within our grip."

"And so you came here to search for him?" I could feel the bitter scorn in the voice. "In his father's home!" "I certainly did," angrily. "I shall search the house from cellar to garret before I leave."

"But you are on parole."

"Damn the parole. What do I care for a pledge given to a band of plundering outlaws? And what do I care for Eric? He chose for himself, and has no right to expect any mercy from me, and by all the gods, he'll receive none. I half believe that attack last night was his planning, and that now you have him hidden away here. Now listen to me! I do not desire to be harsh, but I'm a soldier. My men are not armed, but there are enough out there to handle the servants barehanded. No one can get out of this house without being seen; I've attended to that."

"And you propose searching the rooms?"

"I do. If you had been a little more genial I might have exhibited greater courtesy. But I haven't any use for Eric, and never had. Now you know the truth."

"It merely illustrates more clearly your character."

"You are always free enough with your comments. I shall do my duty to the King."

"Very well, sir," and the incensed lieutenant pushed back his chair. "Then we clearly understand each other at last. I am sincerely glad of it. From now on I shall never again be guilty of mistaking you for a friend or a gentleman. No, I have no wish to listen to another word; you have spoken frankly enough, and I understand the situation. Perhaps it is only anger, but it gives me the excuse I have been seeking after a long while in vain. Whatever claim you may have had upon my regard in the past is over with, forever over with, Captain Grant."

"But—but, surely—"

"I mean precisely that. You can cover your despicable actions with the gloss of military duty, but I know you now as a revengeful liar. Treat this house as you please. I refuse to have any more dealings or words with you. I'll provision you and your men, as I would any others suffering from hunger, but that ends all. If you search this house do it by force, and in any way you please, but expect no assistance from me. I bid you good-day, sir, and will send Peter to call you when breakfast is ready."

I closed the crack of the door as he came forth into the hall, having no desire to be caught listening. My own position was more unpleasant and hazardous than ever. Whatever reason the lieutenant might have for holding me prisoner I was convinced he possessed no knowledge as to my real identity. The probability was that after an interview I would be released. But Grant would recognize me instantly, and he proposed searching the house, room by room, seeking this man Eric. I must make my escape first. Yet how could this be accomplished? I heard Peter pass along the hall, and solemnly announce the serving of breakfast. He and Grant exchanged a few sentences, and then the latter strode to the front door, where he gave orders to the men. I watched the German officers come up the steps, while the majority of the others forming into irregular line, marched around the corner of the house. A small squad remained, however, on guard, facing the front entrance.

CHAPTER XIV.

Again the Lady.

I must think rapidly, and act as quickly. Yet, if what Grant had said was true, that he had already posted guards on each side the house, then escape by daylight was practically impossible. From all I could see there was no concealment close at hand, and while the fellows were without arms, yet their numbers were sufficient to make any attempt at running their lines extra hazardous. And I had much at risk, for if taken it would be as a spy, and not a mere prisoner of war. There was no place for concealment in the library, but there might be upstairs, in the attic, or on the roof. The chance was worth the trial, and there could be no better time for such an experiment than while the three officers were at breakfast. Whatever servants remained about the house would be busily employed also, and probably I should have the entire upper portion to myself. Deciding to make the venture I had my hand on the knob of the door, when it was opened quietly from without, and I was startled by the sudden appearance of Peter. Whatever excitement may have prevailed among the other members of this peculiar household this model servant remained with dignity untroubled. He surveyed me calmly, rubbing his bald head with one hand.

"You will pardon the delay, sir," he said calmly. "But circumstances have arisen changing the original plans. Will you kindly accompany me?"

"But where, Peter? I don't wish to be seen by these new arrivals."

"Have no fear, sir," condescendingly, and with an authoritative wave of the hand. "The officers are at table, and will know nothing of our movements."

To Frame Code of International Law.

Rio de Janeiro, June 26.—The conference of the international commission of jurists, for which the preliminary arrangements were made at the Pan-American Conference of last year assembled in this city today with delegates in attendance from virtually all of the American republics. The United States has sent as its representative Frederick Van Dyne, assistant solicitor of the Department of state, and John Bassett Moore, professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia University. The conference is expected to initiate the first formal code of international law to which all the American states will subscribe, and which eventually may become the basis for the administration of the great international tribunal for which peace advocates have been striving.
